

BuildingConservation.com

Over the past decade there's been an explosion in the amount of building conservation information on the internet. While the speed of the internet's growth has left some websites stranded and struggling to attract the visitors they want, those in the building conservation sector enjoy the benefit of one site which puts them and hundreds of related websites firmly on the map.

Building Conservation Online

Designed and maintained by Cathedral Communications, publisher of The Building Conservation Directory, BuildingConservation.com attracts up to 60,000 unique visitors and over 1 million hits per month. BuildingConservation.com is by far the largest and most useful source of conservation products and services on the internet with over 1,500 companies and organisations represented, 400 articles and hundreds of courses and events listings and other useful information available to site users.

BuildingConservation.com provides specialist suppliers a highly visible and effective means of promoting their products and services on the internet, meeting new customers and keeping in touch with the building conservation industry. For those who already have their own site, a simple hotlink from BuildingConservation.com will help funnel like-minded visitors along to theirs.
